VOX MEDIA

DESIGNER AND DEVELOPER

May 2014-present

Over the summer, I worked primarily for Vox.com, identifying and solving for the quickly changing needs of the new site.

I worked closely with editors to create social media styles and design for features. All the while, I listened to the editorial team, figuring out what tools I or the product team could build to help enhance stories.

Currently, I'm working on the redesign of Racked and have helped finalize details of the Eater redesign.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

GRAPHICS REPORTER

May 2013-August 2013

On a daily basis, I researched and designed graphics for the Tribune's print product. I was able to produce a graphic a day on average, coordinating with different parts of the team to keep all gears moving.

The night the Blackhawks won the Stanley Cup, I helped get the special section out the door for the following day's paper.

I've since returned to work during breaks from school and to help report for the Olympics.

INDIANAPOLIS STAR

PAGE DESIGNER

June 2012-August 2012

By the time I left the Star, I had designed for every section. Three days a week, I would focus on the daily product, spending the other two mainly on advance features.

Typically, I designed 6-12 pages a night on deadline, filling down time with features design.
